THE GREAT INTERNATIONAL SCULLING MATCH.

Disastrous Defeat of Hamill—Reports of Foul Play—Another Match Mentioned, Etc. Etc.

Newcastle-on-Tyne (July 18th) correspondence of London Times. The second great sculler match between Henry Kelly, of Falmouth, and James Hamill, of Philadelphia.

The time for the men to get into their boats was half-past eight, and at that hour the race commenced.

THE START. The men got well away at seventeen minutes to nine o'clock. Kelly led, but for the first quarter of a mile the race was a good one.

THE RACE. At the end of a mile Kelly was six boats' lengths ahead of Hamill, and he pulled at all his might.

THE IRISH DELEGATION TO EUROPE.

tribute to the loyalty of the Canadian volunteers, adding an expression of his desire that a consideration of all the British American colonies might soon be accomplished.

VIENNA, July 10.—The Emperor of Austria has issued a manifesto in which he says:—The heavy military which had defeated his Army of the North moved to its utmost core his army; but his reliance had placed upon the devotion of his people, the courage of his army, upon God and his good and sacred right, wavered not a single instant.

He had addressed himself to the Emperor of the French, requesting his good offices for bringing about a peace between the Emperor of Austria and the Emperor of France.

This offer he accepts, and announces himself prepared to make peace upon honorable conditions to the Emperor of France, provided that the Emperor of France could not make a peace by which Austria's position as a great power would be shaken.

All the available troops are being concentrated, and the gaps in the ranks filled by conscriptions and levies of the militia.

Mr. Scovel Defines His Position.

Camden, N. J., July 21, 1866. To the Editor of The Evening Telegraph.

Sir—Will you oblige me by publishing the inclosed letter from this morning's Inquirer? As I have not gone over to the friends of the Rebellion, I don't desire your reporter to make the world think I have.

Yours, J. M. Scovel. The "Quarrel" in New Jersey—Vindication of Mr. Scovel's Legislative Conduct—What Possibilities He will Employ—His Present Political Proclivities.

These are brave words. I would not now make allusion to these attacks if I did not fear your readers might give undue importance to these personal vituperations, and the more reason for me to put upon record my denial of the charges which are frequently made.

Neither poor, nor good manners require that this quarrel should be made the occasion for ill will, and I have no objection to your saying that I have been silent since the Legislature adjourned, because I have believed it possible that a public opportunity would occur in which I could most my own face to face before the people.

They have always been my friends—the politicians never. And while I shall seek no opportunity to vindicate myself or my term, I will not, I will gladly embrace any opportunity which may come without my seeking it.

It was a noble sentiment of Caesar's that he would rather die than be sweet to fear, and I write to you that my friends and my foes may know that my temper is sweet towards all the world, including my late brethren of the Broad Street League, at which "man's son" that I have no objection to your saying that I have been silent since the Legislature adjourned, because I have believed it possible that a public opportunity would occur in which I could most my own face to face before the people.
